

Please let Wisconsin have it's own NO CALL LIST. It's working here so if it isn't broke why fix it. Just because some national banking group wants to bother me at home every night doesn't make it right. There is enough lag time between a person signs up for the no call list and that it is implemented that those banks can call then. Or here is an idea, if you go ahead and let them call me for 18 months or what ever time frame they are asking for, tell them that they have to use only telemarketers that are based in the US, with only calls originating in the US and the phone number can not be blocked from caller ID and can not be marked private. I enjoy my quiet time at night and I get up early in the am, so go to bed early, 6:30am, so I don't need my phone ringing at 7:30pm trying to sell me something I don't want. I personally make it a habit never to purchase anything over the phone from someone that called me. There is enough fraud out there at this time and this change in law will only give the crooks another opening to try to get at my information and my money. Please don't make it necessary for Wisconsin No Call List to be changed.
